Reapportionment Wrangle Faces Legislature

PROPOSED TAX SETUP STILL UNDER DEBATE

Washington, Dec. 27.—(P)—The Truman administration apparently has not completed its plans for seeking heavier taxes from the new 82nd congress.

The president has said further taxes will be needed for defense, but last night, after Mr. Truman met with four of his top advisers at dinner, a White House aide told reporters:

"I doubt very much if there will be a request for new taxes in January."

The aide was Joseph Short, the White House press secretary, who attended the dinner.

His remark was sandwiched into a news conference in which he reported that the topics discussed at the meeting included the Korean situation and the president's "State of the Union" message to the new congress early in January.

The four top advisers who had dinner with Mr. Truman at the Blair House were Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Defense Marshall, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, and General Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

Mr. Truman had flown back to Washington during the afternoon, returning from his Christmas vacation in Missouri a day earlier than he had planned.

Short wouldn't elaborate on his tax comment. It has been taken for granted in congress, and among government officials, that the 82nd Congress which comes into existence Jan. 3 will be asked to provide still more revenue to build up the nation's war machine.

In the absence of official interpretation, Short's statement is being taken in some circles as a hint that the new tax bill is not yet ready, and may be deferred to a later date than the opening of the session.

There have already been two big tax bills since the Korean war began last June.

RULING FAVORS CLUB

Pittsburgh, Dec. 27.—(P)—Judge Henry Ellenbogen has agreed with the Duquesne Club that it is not a commercial venture and ruled the club does not have to pay Pittsburgh's mercantile tax. The judge said the club is engaged in the sale of food, drinks, cigars and cigarettes only as a necessary incident of its club facilities. The Club went to court when the city tried to collect $1,200 in mercantile taxes.

Hike In Teacher Salary and Retirement Benefits Holds Spotlight at Convention

Harrisburg, Dec. 27.—(P)—A proposed $92,000,000 increase in teacher salary and retirement benefits held priority attention before the Pennsylvania State Education Association's annual convention here today.

More than 2500 delegates from all parts of the state were expected on hand for the three-day meeting.

The PSEA's legislative committee already has gone on record in favor of extensive increases both in teacher salaries and retirement pensions.

The convention will take formal action on the proposal, estimated to add some $92,000,000 to the state's school bill. If approved by the convention, the proposed increase will be submitted to the 1951 legislature for consideration.

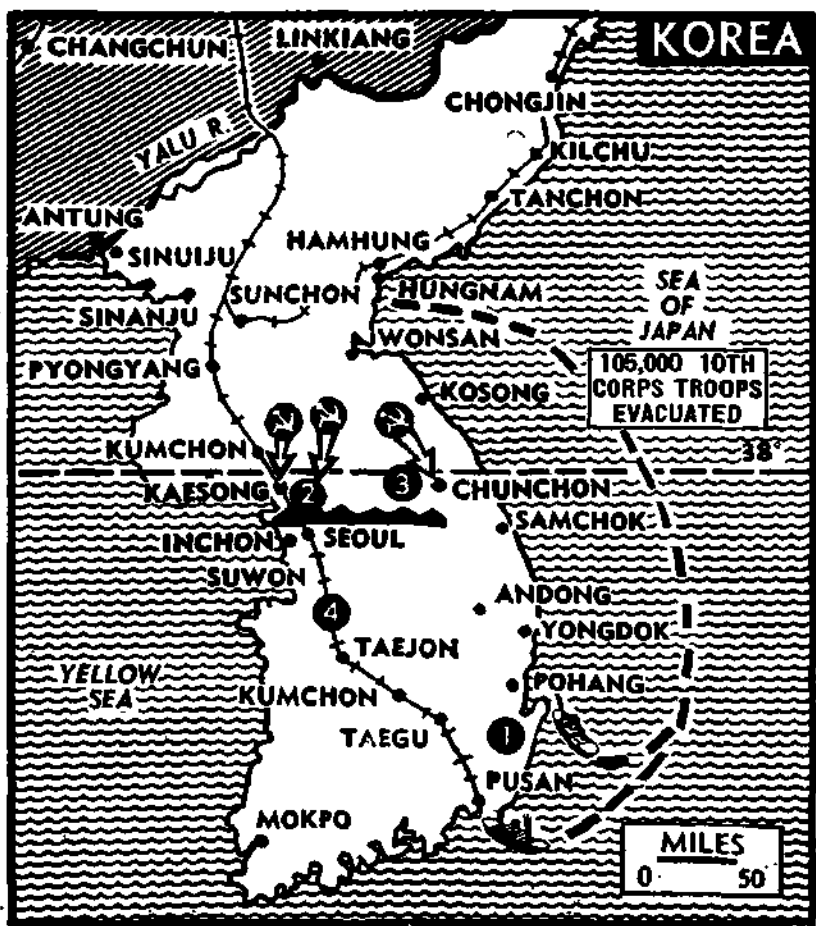

The PSEA's membership comprises most of the state's 60,000 public school teachers.

The three-day convention will get underway this afternoon with a series of talks by outstanding educators. A get-acquainted dinner will be held tonight, followed by a meeting of the house of delegates to nominate new officers.

The proposed upward revision in both present minimum and maximum teacher salary scales would include an immediate $400 a year salary boost for all teachers in the form of two $200 increments.

Lowest Temperature of Season Reported In Warren Area and Sections of State

"Frosty, the Snow Man" was the favorite theme song for Warren county residents this morning, as the mercury tumbled down around the zero mark during the night.

Bright moonlight made a picturesque setting on the new fallen snow last evening, and Jack Frost and all his helpers added their special touches to the scene with their ice paintings on windows of homes, stores and car windows.

Many motorists were unable to start their cars, and those that did get the family chariots rolling found driving extremely hazardous.

The thermometer in Warren at 11:30 o'clock last night showed a frigid two degrees below zero. At 1 a. m., the reading was two above, but by 8 a. m. it was back down to one below. To the west, it was even colder with Titusville reporting 11 degrees under the zero mark, the coldest reading in that community in the past two years.

The Robert Vicini home at Morrison Run reported 22 degrees below, the coldest in the area.

The mercury is expected to rise to "around 15 above" today, but "cold again" is forecast for tonight.

By The Associated Press The lowest temperatures of the winter, ranging from 4 above zero in Pittsburgh to 21 below at Emporium, were reported in Pennsylvania today (Wednesday).

Several fires were fought in the freezing temperatures.

Many roads throughout the state remain in hazardous condition. The weatherman played no favorites as the frigid cold wave moved in from the Midwest.

There's no likelihood of a break before Friday. The weatherman says even lower temperatures may be reported tonight and Thursday in some sections of the state.

As the cold wave moved in, firemen urged extreme caution in firing stoves and furnaces and in thawing frozen pipes.

Punxsutawney, the home of the groundhog, reported a 15 below zero reading while it was 10 below in Butler. Similar 10 below readings were reported in Brookville, Curwensville and Williamsport.

The weather bureau reported Tuesday's snowfall measured from one to four inches across the state. Only light flurries were predicted today.

Local Defense Council For Townships Of Sheffield and Cherry Grove Planned

Definite steps for establishing a local defense council for Sheffield and Cherry Grove Townships were made last night at a meeting in the I. O. O. F. hall in Sheffield.

The meeting was in charge of Frank Handeside, local coordinator, and invocation was offered by the Rev. John E. McCleery.

Warren County Deputy Coordinator W. Floyd Clinger spoke briefly on the purposes and organization procedure of the

NEW CENSUS MEANS SLASH IN DELEGATION

Harrisburg, Dec. 27.—(P)—The 1951 legislature headed today into another political wrangle on the issue of reapportioning congressional and legislative districts.

It's a problem that comes up every 10 years and one that republicans and democrats fight about right down party lines.

The constitution requires state lawmakers to re-arrange congressional and legislative districts every 10 years to conform with population changes.

Although the legislature has followed through with such changes in relation to congressmen, the job of redistricting state senators and house members hasn't been done since the 1920 census.

Pennsylvania's congressional delegation probably will be cut from 33 to 30 under 1950 census figures. The keystone state is the only state to lose three members.

Republicans have enough votes in both the house and senate to put across their own re-apportionment plan which is still to be drawn up by the General Assembly's joint state government commission.

The commission is marking time on setting up the plan until the U. S. census bureau submits official figures down to township and ward to the level.

Under the present setup, Pennsylvania's congressmen are chosen on the basis of one for each 300,000 population. The new arrangement will require a redistricting on the basis of one for approximately 348,000 persons.

Some districts are far above the 348,000 figure and others are below.

The lawmakers can increase or decrease their own membership comprising 50 state senators and 208 assemblymen.

The democrat majority in the 1937 legislature approached the legislative reapportionment problem, set up new districts but the state supreme court threw the law out because of errors.

Another knotty problem confronting the legislature is the question of establishing a fair employment practices commission in Pennsylvania.

Mother of Maimed Soldier Will Visit Him at Walter Reed

BULLETIN

Middleburg, Dec. 27.—(P)—Mrs. Clara Smith put off plans at the last minute today to fly to Washington to visit her 20-year-old son, Pfc. Robert L. Smith, who lost parts of both arms and legs with the U. S. Army in Korea. A neighbor said that Mrs. Smith was ready to drive to Sunbury to board a plane when she decided to delay the trip to the national capital. Mrs. Smith was reported as having a cold and of wanting it cleared up before seeing her son.

Middleburg, Dec. 27.—(P)—Widowed Mrs. Clara Smith left for Washington today to visit with her 20-year-old son Robert, disabled in all four limbs by frostbite suffered in the Korean war.

Mrs. Smith left her home here for the Sunbury airport 20 miles away—where a three-place plane, chartered by the American Legion, was to fly her to the Washington National Airport. The plane was scheduled to arrive in Washington shortly after 1 p. m.

At the same time, the son was being flown from an air base in California to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington. His plane put down at Westover, Mass., and he was transferred to another plane for Washington.

Mrs. Smith was to be accompanied on the flight by Joseph S. McCracken, Kingston, Pennsylvania department commander of the American Legion. McCracken was to board the plane during a brief stop over at Harrisburg.

McCracken said the Legion will pay all her expenses while she is in Washington "for as long as she wants to stay."

Wails Rather Than Wassails Will Be Mode as New Year's Chimes Ring Out in the State

By The Associated Press Wails rather than wassails will be the reluctant mode of the big evening as the new year chimes ring out in Pennsylvania.

Among drinkers, that is, who like to savor their year-end fun amidst the hubbub and color and conviviality of taprooms, cocktail lounges and simple saloons.

The last day of the old year being Sunday, the state's "blue" law, nearly 100 years old, gives the quietus to customary jollity in public drinking places. Under the law, no alcoholic drinks can be bought on public premises until 7 a. m. Monday, January 1. And by that time the festive fever is likely to have spent itself, or to have been so frustrated that opening up time will hardly raise a blink from a bleary eye.

For those who prefer to toast 1951 without benefit of spirits, and in generally subdued fashion, and for others who do their drinking at home or in private clubs, the clamp-down will make no difference. It won't make too much difference in Pittsburgh, either. Downtown night clubs there are going to call it a year on Saturday, December 30. At least five of the leading clubs in the city will have their celebrations 24 hours earlier than usual, a compromise with the calendar bound to be welcome to many.

By no means all the planned observances are of the noisier, uninhibited kind. In prospect, too, are many parties for older children and for late teen-agers. Family gatherings, which began with Christmas, will continue through New Year's day, their mood one of quiet cheer. In churches and chapels, and in homes as well, the traditional midnight watch will be held, and this season more than any since the end of World War II, impressive numbers will turn to prayer and meditation, heeding pastoral summons or impelled by their own impulses or inspirations.

Red China's War Machine May Number At Least 12,000,000 Men By End of '51

Hong Kong, Dec. 27.—(P)—Communist China, with her vast reservoir of manpower, may have a fighting force of 12,000,000 men by the end of 1951.

That seems a fair estimate unless something unexpected happens to the plans for Red China's war machine.

New additions to the Communists' huge army are reported daily. But it is becoming increasingly difficult to keep track of mobilization statistics.

Available figures and current news dispatches give this size-up of Red China forces, actual and potential:

She now has a regular army of 5,000,000 men.

"Irregular" forces are understood to number another 5,000,000. Many of these "irregulars" are being shaped into fighting form.

The Chinese Communists' total mobilization campaign—if it continues at its indicated pace—is expected to add another 2,000,000 in the coming year.

The Reds announced their mobilization campaign Dec. 12. Peiping called for all workers and students to enter military training schools.

They should prepare themselves, the Peiping government declared, for keeping "the dirty swines' lips from sticking into the fence of our beautiful garden." Such expressions are common in the Chinese Reds' "hate America" campaign.

Incomplete official figures disclose an enrollment of 101,000 "student volunteers" in the three-week period.

It is probably safe to presume that enlistment from the ranks of labor, which heavily outnumber China's students, is at least equally as high.

WEALTHY GIRL BRIDE OF COBBLER'S SON

Houston, Dec. 27.—(P)—The marriage of Glenna Lee McCarthy, pretty teen-age daughter of Texas oilman Glenn McCarthy, to a Houston shoe cobbler's son was confirmed today by Justice of Peace.

"They looked like every other young couple very much in love," said Justice Nash Oliver of Waco of Glenna Lee and football player George Pontikes. He said he married them Dec. 2 at Waco.

McCarthy himself was once a poor boy, who pyramided an early stake in the oil business into an industrial empire which now concerns itself with many products other than oil.

Gen. Ridgway In Talk With Rhee Gives Indication Allies Will Make Fight For Republic

Tokyo, Dec. 27.—(P)—General MacArthur's headquarters said today more than 1,350,000 Reds are poised to strike at United Nations forces in Korea.

Light attacks were beaten off along Korea's midsection but the Reds still held off their threatened second invasion of South Korea with their vast tide of manpower.

MacArthur estimated 444,000 Reds are deployed along the front stretching across the peninsula south of parallel 38. He reported 277,173 of those troops are Chinese and the rest are North Koreans.

Nearly a million others, he said, are either en route to the front or in reserve in Manchuria.

In the forefront of the expected assault is a revamped Red Korean army of 23 divisions and three brigades. Eleven of the divisions were identified during the past 12 days as their patrols probed the Allied defense positions.

Many of the new North Korean divisions are believed comprised

Remington Story Is Contradicted By Divorced Wife

New York, Dec. 27.—(P)—The divorced wife of William H. Remington testified today that he turned over "a top secret" formula for explosives to an admitted Russian spy ring courier. The formula, which was to be forwarded to Russia, would make explosives from garbage, she said. Mrs. Ann Remington gave the testimony in her second day on the witness stand at the perjury trial of her former husband, a one-time Commerce Department economist. Remington, 33, denied to a New York federal grand jury that he ever was a member of the Communist party.

New York, Dec. 27.—(P)—William W. Remington, former Commerce Department economist, heard his divorced wife give testimony yesterday that contradicted his steadfast denial of Communist party membership.

Mrs. Ann Remington, an unsmiling witness at her former husband's perjury trial, said that in 1938 Remington "told me he was a member of the Communist party and abjured me to secrecy on that."

Pennsylvania Railroad Announces Plans For Discontinuing Trains 970 and 971

Another step in the continuing loss of rail service for this area may be taken in the near future, according to a Pennsylvania Railroad Company announcement, which states that trains Nos. 970 and 971, operating daily excepting Sunday, between Erie and Emporium, will be discontinued.

With reference to a statement which says that rail representatives will call at the various communities affected, it is the opinion that the Chamber of Commerce groups in Warren, Erie, Corry, Kane and Emporium will protest the proposed discontinuance.

The railroad, in making the announcement, said, "For many years the growing use of private automobiles, buses and trucks has resulted in more traffic leaving the railroads, especially in somewhat sparsely populated country."

"Surveys indicate that very few passengers are using these trains at any station."

"This service produces revenue from passengers handled of less than 20 cents per mile, and a total of 75 cents per mile for passenger, mail and express traffic, while the cost of operation is approximately $2.80 per mile. The yearly loss amounts to upwards of $180,000."

"Trains Nos. 580 and 581 will furnish service between New York, Philadelphia, Washington and points in northwestern Pennsylvania on their present schedules."

"Adequate plans will be made to provide satisfactory service for mail and express traffic."

"We regret that such action has become necessary, but it is obvious that the very small use of these trains does not justify their continued operation."

"Representatives of our railroad will make calls in the territory affected to explain this situation in more detail."

Owner of Store Is Eyewitness During Shoplifters' Visit

Four county people, who spent Christmas in Chautauque county jail at Mayville, are expected to be released within a short time upon payment of fines and costs in connection with charges of larceny filed against them at Cutting, N. Y., on Sunday.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Conklin, and Keith Wolford, of Tidoute, and Raymond Rounds, of Irvine.

According to Deputy Sheriff Richard K. Moynihan, of Mayville, the quartet was apprehended while shoplifting at the Bemis General Store at Cutting. He said the four entered the place on Sunday evening and ordered a quantity of beer to take out.

While Mrs. Bemis was obtaining the beer from a cooler, they allegedly picked up a shotgun and electric iron, a portable electric mixer and some clothing and ran with it to the car outside.

While the theft was not observed by Mrs. Bemis, her husband, who was upstairs at the store, saw the four and called a relative and some nearby neighbors for assistance.

Moynihan said they were taken into custody by Constable Homer Loomis, Sr., of Clamcy, and Deputy Less Thompson, and arraigned before Justice Richard O. Dell, French Creek. Under pleas of guilty, they were sentenced to pay fines of $25 and costs each, and were remanded to jail in default of the fines.

Pope Signs Decree Extending Holy Year Through '51

Vatican City—(P)—Roman Catholics throughout the world earned Tuesday they will be expected to increase their prayers—particularly prayers for peace of the world—to gain the benefits of the extension of Holy Year.

The Papal bull extending Holy Year through 1951 for the world's Catholics, was signed by Pope Pius XII Monday, Christmas day, after the closing of the 1950 "Anno Santo." The bull, entitled "per annum sacrum," was published by L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper.

As the 25th Holy Year of the church ended—in many ways it was the greatest jubilee in the history of the church—the Pope faced a trying period which would be devoted largely to his continued crusade for peace.

Called the "Pope of Peace," the Pontiff has seen little of it since he ascended St. Peter's throne March 2, 1939. The "rainbow of peace" for which he had millions of pilgrims to Rome prayed throughout 1950 failed to materialize and instead, the Pope warned in his Christmas message, mankind faces disension which reaches to "the ends of the earth."

The 1950 jubilee drew 4,000,000 Catholics to Rome to gain the Holy Year's spiritual benefits. To achieve those benefits in 1951, the Papal bull said, Catholics throughout the world must say more prayers and must especially invoke the intercession of the Virgin Mary. The crowning event of the 1950 Holy Year was the proclamation as dogma of the assumption of the Virgin bodily into heaven.

"Everyone," L'Osservatore said in explaining the bull, "can realize the opportunity of invoking during this period again so menacing, the Most Holy Virgin, Queen of Peace."

When a Catholic is offering the prayers to gain the spiritual benefits, he must recite five times the "Our Father," the "Hail Mary" and the "Glory be to the Father," plus one of each for the intentions of the Pope. In addition the "credo" must be recited. Then three additional "Hail Marys" must be recited along with the invocation, "Queen of Peace, pray for us," and finally one "Salve Regina." These are obligatory under the terms of the bull, but it also urges that the prayer composed by the Pope for Holy Year also be recited.

EISENHOWER HAS TOUGH TASK

Better than almost any man alive, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has come to symbolize the hopes of free men. There will be supreme faith in him as he begins building a unified European defense force.

Accepting this crucial responsibility undoubtedly represents a real sacrifice for the general. He takes his job as president of Columbia University. Recently he bought a farm near Gettysburg, Pa., and he was planning to spend a lot of time there. Moreover, he's past 60, and he's troubled by high blood pressure.

But he was the unanimous choice of the 12 Atlantic Pact countries and he has responded to the call of duty as one would expect him to do. Said President Truman in announcing his selection: "His experience and talents make him uniquely qualified."

Some military men believe Eisenhower will have more authority in his new post than he did as Allied commander in Europe during World War II. He probably will need it, for he faces a task of extreme difficulty.

In World War II, the general's enemy was already declared when he took over. He knew what he was up against. He knew, too, that Germany was being engaged heavily by Russia in the East, and that he wouldn't have to combat the Nazis' full power.

This time that same Russia is the potential though not the declared enemy. But Soviet forces are not now actively engaged anywhere, nor is anyone likely to divert their attention seriously from the West. China, the only big nation at Russia's back door, is friend.

Furthermore, the Soviet Union, through her soldiers are doing no shooting, is waging a strange, unorthodox kind of warfare against the West. She robs her satellites and other friends to embroil western armies in combat that fritters away their strength. Meantime, she indulges in an endless campaign of harassment in the United Nations and on the political, diplomatic and psychological fronts generally.

Only Moscow knows, of course, when this weird struggle may enter a decisive shooting phase. It is for that that Eisenhower must make his army ready.

Under present plans he will command a force of 55 to 60 divisions, backed up by Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets and large air elements. But only a small part of the ground forces, estimated at one million men, is now in being. The remainder will not be ready until late 1953, according to existing schedules.

One of the first things Eisenhower will need to determine is whether this force and the timetable for its establishment are adequate to meet the possible perils of the days ahead.

Eisenhower is a genuine leader, with the qualities of both general and statesman. High among those attributes is a hard-headed sense of realism. Free men here and in Europe are counting upon him to give it to them straight—to tell them exactly how big their armies must be and how fast they must be built up to be reasonably safe against Russian attack.

LEWIS BEHAVIOR-PATTERN SHOWS AGAIN

John L. Lewis, the professional non-conformist, already is acting like a man who has no intention of cooperating with the government in the current emergency.

He has signified refusal to recognize the authority of the Wage Stabilization Board, and he sent an underling to a meeting of top labor and government people in Washington.

Lewis, who ordered four coal strikes in 1943, a critical war year, clearly would not hesitate to interrupt defense activity in another crisis.

The United Mine Workers' contract does not expire until April 1, 1951. That gives President Truman and his key labor advisers about three months in which to prepare to deal with Lewis this time. They should be ready for any eventuality and should be equipped to cope swiftly with any serious interference with the flow of vital fuel to defense industries.

The area was visited by the first sub-zero temperature of the season during the night, and according to all reports more of the same brand of weather is on the way.

Here And There

The "Twenty Years Ago" column recalls that it was just forty years ago that Hartman Brothers, John and Fred, purchased the barber shop in the basement of the Warren Savings Bank building, presently conducted by Tom Conway. The article telling of the transaction in December, 1908, as reprinted from one of our files of that time follows:

A transaction of considerable importance was consummated today when John C. and Fred M. Hartman as Hartman Brothers, purchased of Louis P. Meyer his barber shop fixtures, business and good will, located in the basement of the Warren Savings Bank. Possession has already been given.

Mr. Meyer is, in point of service, the oldest barber in Warren, having been at the trade for nearly 42 years, about 37 of which he has been in business for himself. He learned his trade of Joe Wongarone, who conducted a shop under the store now occupied by A. A. Printz. Later Mr. Meyer and William Robertson purchased the shop and after several years removed to the rooms now occupied by J. A. Schofield; from there they moved to the New Warren Hotel building and later, when the Warren Savings Bank building was erected, Mr. Meyer opened a shop in the basement and has since been located there.

The Meyer barber shop is popular not only in Warren but with the transient trade, and the many friends and patrons of Mr. Meyer will no doubt be somewhat surprised to learn he has sold his business and intends taking up other employment. He will leave next Sunday for Bartlesville, Okla., there to be employed as leaseholder by George C. Priestly, a former resident of this city.

Hartman Brothers, who become the possessors of the Meyer shop, are among the most prominent and widely known men of their trade in the city or county. They have conducted a barber shop under the First National Bank for thirteen years, the first three years of which time, however, the business was run by Fred Hartman, now the junior partner of the firm. Through their accommodating ways and satisfactory tonorial work they have built up a barber business that is second to none in the city. Few men there are in Warren borough or in the county, who have not some time been satisfactorily served at the Hartman barber shop.

A remarkable coincidence of the deal is that John Hartman buys out the man under whom he learned his trade 26 years ago. That was in the basement of the New Warren Hotel, where he worked for several years after mastering his chosen calling.

It is also noteworthy that with the closing of the present Hartman shop, the pioneer barber shop of the city passes away. The quarters occupied by them have been used continuously as a tonorial parlor for the past 42 years. The place is one of the landmarks of the city and to this is accountable in a measure the fact that the location if the shop is so well known to the residents of city and county.

This And That: Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Uhl, of Kane, spent Christmas with their son Charles and family in Tidoute, and will leave shortly after the first of the year for St. Petersburg, Fla., to spend the winter. . . . The annual program and party for children of the Salvation Army will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the citadel in Times Square; there will be the usual entertainment, with visitation from Santa Claus who will help distribute treats for the kiddies. . . . Christmas tree thieves drove up to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Obourn, about a mile west of Kane, walked up to the residence to see if anyone was up and around, then cut a beautiful ornamental evergreen from the front yard, placed it in a car and drove off. . . . Here's an explanation from the Kane Republican that should be read with interest by basketball fans of Warren: "Our friends from Warren issued an informal complaint through the columns of their newspaper that there weren't any seats available for Warren fans in the game Tuesday when the 'towering' Kane team took the measure of the Dragons. . . . there was nothing inaccurate in their statement about the seats; that was announced before the season started. . . . the local school authorities work in the assumption that it's better to announce beforehand that local fans have bought out the gymnasium than it is to make no announcement and then keep a flock of out-of-town fans standing outside after a 30-mile drive for lack of seats. . . . that has happened in Kane and also in Warren in previous years. . . . this year's program is an experiment here but thus far it has worked out pretty well." . . . Harold S. Gahagan, of Franklin, has been promoted to the position of assistant district engineer of the Pennsylvania Department of Highways, taking the place made vacant by the elevation of Glenn D. Myers to district engineer, who replaced Stuart W. Jackson, retired as of December 1st. . . .

'50 Record Makes You Wonder Why People Do Like They Do

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Nineteen fifty will probably pass out as one of the goofiest periods in history. If you doubt this in any way, just try to make sense out of some of the things now going on.

President Truman counsels the country to be calm—just before he himself had written two hot-headed personal notes to music critic Paul Hume, who didn't like his daughter's singing, and to Congressman Eddie Hebert, the ex-city editor who merely asked for a day of prayer.

The country demands speed in mobilization. So the National Production Authority issues cut-back orders effective three months hence. And the Department of Defense cautions against trying to mobilize too fast.

The railway brotherhoods newspaper, "Labor," published in Washington, carries a cartoon showing a man holding up a big sign bearing General Marshall's quotation, "This is no time for violent emotions. It is a time for calm determination." The man, apparently representing Joe Public, is saying, "Those are my sentiments." Three columns away the same publication carries the gloating story of the switchmen's wildcat strike that tied up Christmas mail.

It is announced that the "big four" meat packers—Swift, Armour, Cudahy and Wilson—will this year have the highest profits on record. At the same time the United Packinghouse Workers, CIO, announces that meat prices are now so high that even their families can't afford to eat the stuff.

A PRINCIPAL reason why food costs can't be brought down is that the law prohibits reduction of farm prices below parity rate. This parity formula is intended to keep the prices of the things farmers sell from falling below the price-level of things farmers buy. This is done by government support prices which make it next to impossible for the farmer to lose. Still, the American Farm Bureau at its annual convention in Dallas voted overwhelmingly against price controls. And AFB President Alan Kline tried to put the heat on Washington to have controls killed.

A similar vein of unwillingness to make concessions in the national interest is manifested by the United Auto Workers. Like all other unions, UAW has been strong for rent and price controls which keep down the cost of living. Yet when Economic Stabilizer Alan Valentine issued his roll-back order on automobile prices, UAW President Walter Reuther served notice that his union would move to scrap all labor contracts if any attempt were made to impose wage controls that would upset automatic cost of living increases.

GENERAL WU and the Chinese Communist delegation at the United Nations maintained right to the end that their soldiers fighting in North Korea were all "volunteers." But how the guns and tanks, the ammunition and the Russian MIG jet fighter planes "volunteered" for service in Korea was never explained.

American and French governments complain that the British won't cooperate on the Schuman plan for pooling iron, coal and steel resources of Western Europe. American and British governments complain because France has dragged its heels on plans to rearm west Germany. British and French governments say the Americans should send more troops to Europe and the Americans say the British and French should do more towards arming themselves.

Western European countries, having recovered from their "dollar shortage" well ahead of schedule, now find that there isn't anything to buy with their surplus dollars because the world supply of raw materials isn't big enough to go around.

Meanwhile Great Britain, having been the first Marshall Plan country to "recover," cuts its meat ration to 14 cents a week per person.

PHONE 82 — WARREN, PA.

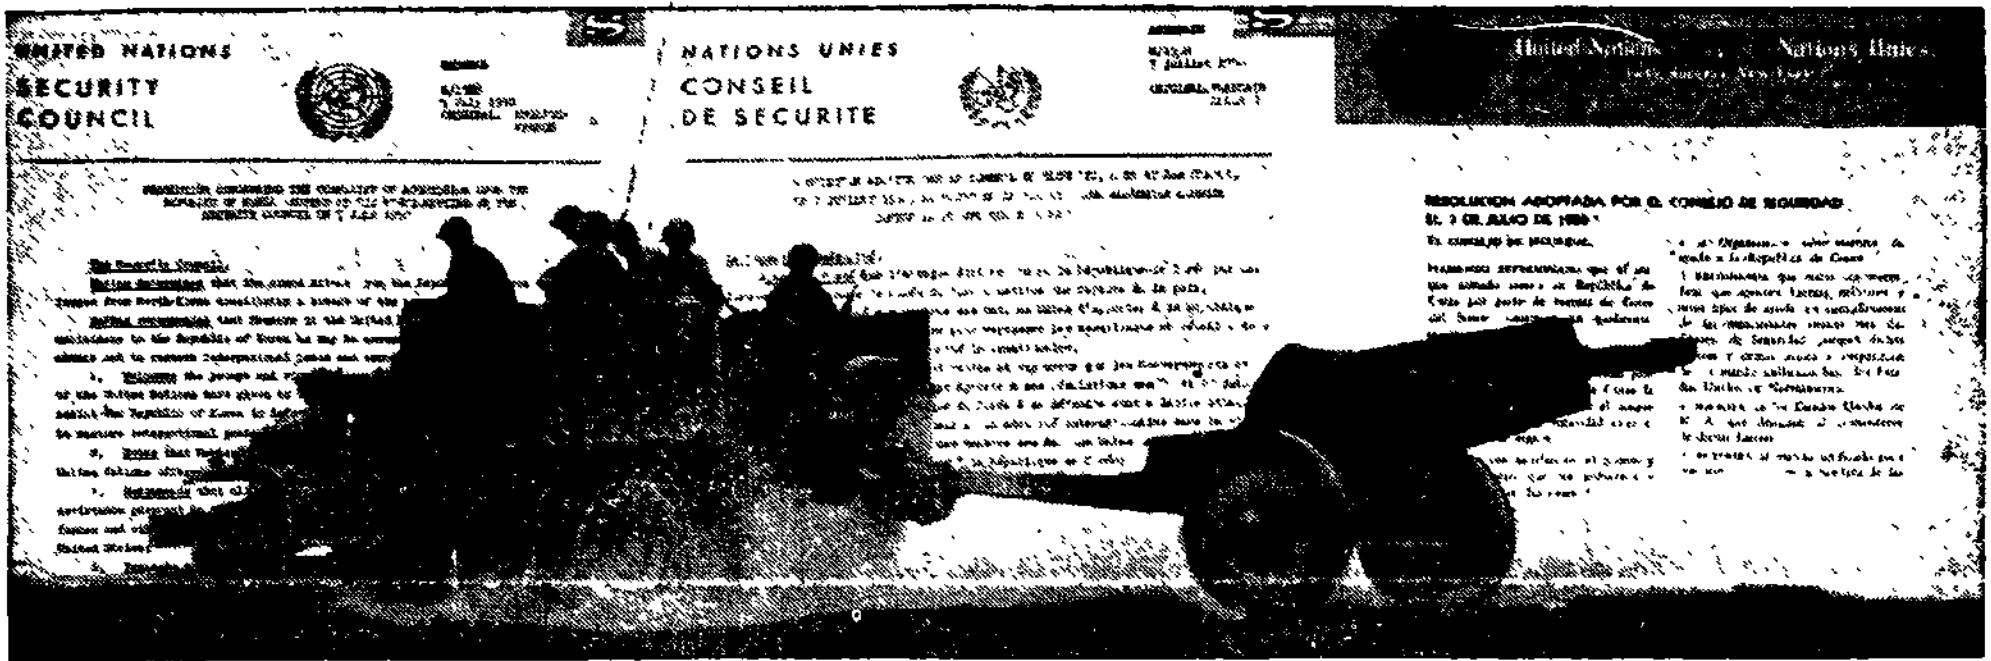

ALTHOUGH little progress was made in breaking the deadlock between East and West, U.N. efforts to ease world tensions. Such was the aim of Trygve Lie's 10-point peace plan which he took in person to the capitals of the Big Four. Mr. Lie is shown here arriving in Paris.

ONE OF THE world's newest nations—the Republic of Indonesia—now independent after agreement with the Netherlands in negotiations aided by U.N., became U.N.'s 60th member. Indonesia's Representative, L. N. Palar, receives congratulations from Abba S. Eban of Israel.

The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is helping thousands of Arab refugees. In Jericho, Arabs are building their own village in the barren desert sands, as part of a project sponsored by the United Nations.

ON 25 JUNE, a few hours before the fifth anniversary of the signing of the Charter, the Security Council identified the attack on the Republic of Korea as a breach of the peace and called on U.N. Members for aid in repelling the attack.

U. N. IN 1950

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY was a momentous year for the United Nations—a year of grave crisis climaxed by U.N. action to restore the peace in Korea. Confronted by the invasion of the Korean Republic, the Security Council promptly called for collective action to halt the armed attack. For the first time in history armed forces of various nations took the field under the blue-and-white banner of the United Nations in a joint effort to support the Security Council, halt aggression and reestablish peace.

The year saw the adoption of vital measures to increase the effectiveness of U.N. as an instrument for maintaining peace. The General Assembly was authorized to act in emergency should the Security Council fail to act. Member nations were called upon to earmark units of their own national forces for U.N. service. Meantime, a fresh call was made to the Big Five to make further efforts to resolve outstanding differences by meeting and discussing major problems threatening world peace.

Despite its preoccupation with the major issues of the "cold war," the United Nations in 1950 stepped up the pace of its concerted drive against poverty, disease, hunger and illiteracy through its expanded program of Technical Assistance. Fifty-four countries, large and small, Members and non-members of U.N., pledged more than $20,000,000 for an international program to help the underdeveloped regions of the world help themselves to improve their standards of living.

Round the world, U.N.'s family of specialized agencies was working for improvements in such vital spheres as health, labor, food, education. Displaced persons and refugees were given a new start in life; the onslaughts of disease—particularly tuberculosis, malaria, yaws, were being checked by international campaigns. World control of narcotics was tightened; measures to suppress the traffic in persons were strengthened in a new Convention; the campaign in defense of human rights and against discrimination consistently extended.

As the world organization entered its sixth year—despite the strains and perils of our time—there was no doubt that the United Nations had established itself firmly as the hope of the peoples of the world.

AFTERMATH OF THE WAR. Scenes like this are common today in Korea. The residents of Seoul salvage what they can from the ruins of their city. The United Nations has estimated the cost of rehabilitation in Korea at $364,000,000 to the end of next year.

U.N. AIDS KOREANS. To meet the urgent need for food in the devastated cities of Korea, the United Command rushed thousands of tons of rice from Japan for free distribution to the people. U.N. and its Member States still face a serious reconstruction task in Korea. It has been estimated that to the end of next June nearly 2,000,000 tons of food will be required for relief.

U.N. FIGHTS EPIDEMICS. United Nations health teams in Korea are inoculating entire populations against smallpox, cholera, typhus and typhoid. Civilians can obtain their rice rations only on presentation of proof of inoculation to the United Nations authorities.

IN LIBYA, the former Italian colony which the United Nations is readying for independence by January 1952, a group of Libyans discuss the issues before voting during elections held in Tobruk.

ONE OF U.N.'s achievements in 1950 was the adoption of its program of Technical Assistance. More men like this U.N.-trained irrigation expert are needed to develop the potentialities of underdeveloped regions. U.N. also provides fellowships for technicians from needy countries.

Real Friendliness Is the Key To Shopping Centers' Success

THE remarkable success of the neighborhood shopping center is due in large measure to the fact that it's convenient for the housewife. But not entirely.

To the modern housewife, the neighborhood shopping center is the modern substitute for the old-time "general store" in the neighborhood it brings into her life.

She is not only known by name to the men who run the small neighborhood businesses but knows them and their clerks by name. And in time she knows a great deal about their lives.

When Bill, the butcher, tells her that his small son is seriously ill in a hospital she asks about him with real concern whenever she stops to buy meat from Bill. And until the baby is out of danger and Bill is his genial self again, she is an easy-to-please customer, taking the first piece of meat Bill holds up for inspection. She doesn't even mention that the stew meat she bought yesterday wasn't as tender as it should have been.

ALL ABOUT MADGE

SHE knows that Madge, the drugstore's short order cook, had to go to work after 14 years of being a stay-at-home housewife. And she knows that back of Madge's good-natured smile, she is worrying about her youngest who comes home from school each day to an empty house.

She gets a revealing glimpse into the life of the woman who checks her groceries when on a quiet morning the woman asks if she knows anyone who is looking for a baby-sitter. The woman adds in a matter-of-fact voice that she would like to do baby-sitting at night, because "with five kids you can always use the extra money." Besides, her oldest girl can get the younger children to bed.

These people know a lot about the housewife, too. They comment when she doesn't show up for a few days. "Have you been sick or out of town?" they ask with genuine interest.

In friendliness, the neighborhood shopping center is the modern equivalent of the old-time general store.

Mrs. C. H. Williams, 402 Hawthorne Street, Abbeville, Louisiana, says if folks would smile and forget their worries they'd all feel lots better and make other folks feel better, too. Mrs. Williams says she has lot to smile about . . . thanks to HADACOL. Mrs. Williams found that by taking HADACOL she helped to overcome a deficiency of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Mrs. Williams' own statement: "I guess it was over a year ago when I really started to feel mighty bad. When I say I was feeling bad I'm not telling a story—I just didn't have one bit of energy. I was tired all the time. I had to do my housework in spells. . . . rest a while and then work a bit. I couldn't eat a full meal either—I guess I didn't eat enough to keep a bit alive. There was many a night I didn't get but a few hours' sleep. Imagine going to bed and then rolling and tossing most of the night. So many of my friends had been praising HADACOL that I finally decided to try HADACOL. After three bottles of HADACOL I could tell a definite improvement . . . now, after taking HADACOL for over a year, I feel just wonderful. I am not tired or restless during the day, I can do all my housework and still have energy to spare. Sleep—why, I sleep like a top. Just as soon as my head hits the pillow I doze off. And the most wonderful thing is that I actually eat the way a person should eat—and I really do enjoy my food. HADACOL is absolutely wonderful. There is nothing like HADACOL. I recommend it to all my friends and neighbors."

Folks All Over the Country whose systems were deficient in Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron have been helped by HADACOL, and HADACOL can help you, too, if you suffer from stomach distress, certain nervous disturbances, insomnia caused by upset stomach vague aches and pains, or a general run-down condition, if they are due to such deficiencies.

That's the kind of product you want—that's the kind you should buy and that's the kind you should start taking NOW!

Start Today!

Give HADACOL a chance to help you, as it has helped others whose systems lacked Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron. Remember, there are no substitutes for HADACOL. Always insist on the genuine HADACOL. No risk involved. Buy a bottle of HADACOL, either the trial size, $1.25 or the large family or hospital size, $3.50, and if HADACOL does not help you, your money will be refunded. If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order it direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana.

For GOOD-ness Sake

By Betty Rice

During the general lull between Christmas and the beginning of a new year, activities at Red Cross headquarters appear to be on the increase. Announcement has been made of a Refresher Course in First Aid instruction scheduled for Monday, January 22. All interested parties may contact Red Cross for complete details. It would seem that such vital courses are designed to cope with any possible emergencies in the future and while we all sincerely hope that war can be avoided, it is better to be prepared in every sense of the word.

An excellent New York resolution would be to offer a pint of whole blood to the Red Cross blood program. Blood and blood derivatives are being used to a great extent in hospitals in the area and by the armed forces wherever they are serving at the moment. . . . such a great extent, as a matter of fact, that quotas are being increased in every participating chapter. It's a tremendous responsibility and one which every American man or woman should share. The bloodmobile returns to 404 Market Street on Wednesday, January 10—so why hesitate . . . make your date!

MENU SUGGESTIONS

BY GAYNOR MADDOX NEA Staff Writer

OUR present pork chop is the third largest in history—so let's make the most of that budget situation.

Pork and Vegetable Pie (4 servings)

Two-thirds cup cubed carrots, 3/4 cup cubed potatoes, 1 small onion, sliced, meat gravy, 1 cup cooked pork, rich biscuit dough.

Cook the vegetables in boiling salted water until almost tender. Drain. Add some of the cooking liquid to the gravy if needed to make about 1 1/2 cups. Mix vegetables, pork and gravy together. Heat thoroughly and pour into a baking pan. Make a rich biscuit dough with 1 cup sifted flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 cup fat and about 1/2 cup milk or enough to make a soft dough. Cut biscuits and arrange on top of meat mixture. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) until biscuits are done and pie is hot—about 15 minutes.

Potatoes, too, are plentiful. So are the people who enjoy hot potato salad.

Hot Potato Salad (4 servings)

Three tablespoons fat, 1/4 cup finely chopped onions, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard, 3 tablespoons vinegar, 3 tablespoons water, 2 tablespoons sweet pickle relish, 1/4 cup dried celery, 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper, 2 1/2 cups diced cooked potatoes.

Heat the fat and brown the onions lightly in it. Mix flour, salt, sugar and mustard and stir in. Add vinegar and water slowly, stirring constantly, and cook until thick. Mix pickle relish, celery and green pepper with potatoes. Add the hot dressing and mix lightly, but thoroughly. Turn into baking dish, cover and heat in oven at 350 degrees F. (moderate) about 20 minutes.

TOMORROW'S MENU

BREAKFAST: Stewed prunes, shredded wheat cereal, enriched toast, butter or fortified margarine, jelly, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Tomato juice, frankfurters, hot potato salad, rye bread, butter or fortified margarine, sliced oranges and bananas, tea, milk.

DINNER: Pork and vegetable pie with biscuit top, buttered green beans, poppy seed rolls, butter or fortified margarine, Pascal celery, steamed cranberry pudding, foamy sauce, coffee, milk.

of the headquarters office. These men spoke briefly on their particular assignments and how their work was coordinated with the program to be established in the Sheffield area.

It was pointed out that Sheffield already has an auxiliary police unit of 22 members, and it was suggested that this be increased to 30 men as quickly as possible and a training program be instituted. Plans also were discussed for development of wardens and auxiliary firemen units, and establishment of training programs.

Handeyside said efforts will be made to have at least two members of the Sheffield unit enrolled in the Red Cross advanced first aid training class to start on January 22, with a view of having these two conduct elementary classes in Sheffield at a later date.

The meeting was attended by more than 100 interested citizens.

SLICK BIDDING GIVES U. S. 930 POINTS

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service

When my team-mates won the world's championship recently at Bermuda, one of the important reasons for their success was their ability to jockey the enemy into poor positions. An outstanding example of this type of skill was displayed in the very last hand of the match against Great Britain.

When George Rapee bid four hearts with the South hand, he showed a long independent suit. Consequently, Sam Stayman, with the North hand, could practically guarantee a contract of six hearts. A lesser player would have bid six hearts right away. Stayman saw deeper into the situation. West had bid five clubs in spite of East's run-out to one spade on the first round of bidding. Obviously West had a very long club suit and a generally freakish hand. Just as obviously, West would bid up to seven clubs as a sacrifice if he were convinced that six hearts could be made against him.

In this sort of situation, the real champion tries to steer the enemy into error. For example, if Stayman thought six hearts was a doubtful contract, he might have bid it anyway to trick West into a sacrifice bid of seven clubs. Since he actually thought six hearts was a fine contract, his object was to make it look very doubtful so as to keep West from sacrificing. For this reason, Stayman bid only five hearts at his second turn. Rapee could not bid the slam since he had three small clubs and might lose a trick or two in that suit for all he could tell. Hence he passed to five hearts.

West naturally proceeded to sacrifice in club against five hearts. Once again Stayman refused to bid the slam. He merely passed, confident that his partner would either bid or double.

This time Rapee could read the situation. He knew his partner would have doubled six clubs if he had been unwilling to hear a bid of six hearts. He also realized what his partner was trying to do.

When South bid six hearts, West didn't know what to do. He felt sure he could take the ace of diamonds but couldn't be sure about any other defensive trick. He finally decided to pass it around to his partner in the hope that East would double with defensive strength or bid seven clubs without it. However, East couldn't read it and passed after a long huddle.

In the other room, the bidding was less subtle. North and South bid six hearts with great confidence, whereupon the American player who had the West cards took the normal sacrifice at seven clubs. He lost only 700 points less than 300 honors. In the first room, Rapee scored 1530 points for the slam (with honors). The American team therefore gained 930 points on the bidding of this hand.

World Series TV Contract Signed

Cincinnati, Dec. 27.—(P)—Signing of a six-year, $6,000,000 contract for television rights to world series and all-star games has brought cheers from some major league club owners, non-committal grunts from others and one acid-dipped criticism.

The contract with the Gillette Safety Razor Co. was announced yesterday by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

Baseball officials such as Warren C. Giles of the Cincinnati Reds, Charles Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox, Horace Stoneham of the New York Giants and Roy Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics praised the transaction. All other owners except Fred Saigh of the St. Louis Cardinals either were unreachable or non-committal.

Saigh, reportedly the ring-leader of the recent, successful attempt to deny Chandler a renewal of his contract in 1932, bitingly termed the signing "in poor taste."

The owner of the Cards insisted, "television is in its infancy. Television rights worth $1,000,000 today may be worth several million two or three years from now. Furthermore, signing such a contract so soon after his (Chandler's) repudiation by the owners seems in poor taste."

Saigh's comment came in sharp contrast with that by Giles, who generally has agreed with Chandler's administration in the past.

The Redleg president remarked upon the newness of video advertising, as did Saigh, but with the angle that only time will tell whether the price is "too much."

Stoneham, boss of the giants, called it a "good deal," as did Roy Mack, the A's vice president.

The $6,000,000 doesn't take in radio rights for the all-star and series contests. Gillette agreed earlier to kick in another $1,370,000 for broadcasting the games for the next six years.

Most of the TV income will go to the baseball players' annuity and insurance plan, Chandler reported yesterday.

That's the money baseball uses to pay participating players $50 to $100 monthly in pensions and annuities after they reach the age of 50.

Gillette paid a total of $975,000 for the combined television-radio rights to the last world series—$800,000 for TV and $175,000 for radio. The club owners voted here in November to throw all that money into the central fund, from which premium payments on the pension plan are made. Central fund payments now cost from $500,000 to $600,000 yearly.

Erie Tech Squad Cops Overtime Clash Against Warren Dragons

No Warren High basketball squad ever worked harder to win the hand of Lady Victory last night at Beatty gym, and the flicker flame coaxed both the Dragons and the Erie Tech Centaurs into an extra frame before giving her victory smile to the Tech squad.

Final score favored Tech, 50 to 43.

The Warren five went into the contest as the underdog, and even the most ardent team followers anticipated another repeat performance of the Erie team's easy 49-33 triumph over the Blue and White at Erie last week. Everything seemed to be in Tech's favor. The visitors lowered above the Blue and White and their record so far ranks them as one of the top contenders for the FIAA Section 16 crown.

But the Dragons unleashed a rip-roaring attack and kept at it with such a dogged determination that the surprised Tech squad was thrown completely off balance. And it wasn't until the closing minutes of the fourth period and in the three-minute overtime that the Tech five lived up to their advance billing.

Bob Hampson, Dragon pivot broke the scoring ice, and Warren ran the score up to 9-1, before Tech got its second point on a free throw. The first stanza ended with Warren ahead, 10-7.

From then on, the game was a dog-fight, with first one team taking the lead, and then yielding it. Midway in the second stanza, the tally read 18-15, in favor of Warren. Ed Majewski racked up a twin counter and Carmen Riazzi, slotted a free throw for Erie to tie the score. Tech went ahead on a free throw and a basket by Majewski, but a nifty double-decker by Bob Foley and a free throw by John Berardi put Warren ahead 21-20, at intermission.

The running score was deadlocked twice in the third frame, 25-25, 27-27, but each time the Dragon edged ahead, and in the final minutes of this round uncorked their best attack, getting four baskets in quick succession to give them a

Ball Player Outsmarts Self When He Fights Percentages

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK.—(NEA)—When Birdie Tebbetts was so strangely sold by the Red Sox to the Indians, it was said that this outstanding catcher was inclined to out-smart himself at times.

You often hear the expression in baseball. Outsmart would seem to be a not too difficult word to fathom, but just what does it mean when applied to a ball player?

It means that Tebbetts and other better-than-passing performers will not let well enough alone. Their baseball art, physically speaking, is excellent, the brain is above average in its power to out-think the opposition.

But here is the rub. The opposition is thinking, too. And the wise guy ball player can carry his thinking too far.

For example, even the better-informed fans know that Joe Straight is a notoriously bad curve-ball hitter. Sure, he'll hit one once in a while. But the percentage is high against him. In that case, the catcher calling for a fast ball is out-smarting himself, especially in a pinch.

The pitcher is wild, yet the batter signals to the runner on first base that he is going to hit-and-run. The baseball trade knows that a player should not hit-and-run-hit at the next pitch, no matter where it is—against a wild pitcher. The percentage is not as good that the batter will get a piece of the ball, and the baserunner is thrown out stealing.

ANY time a player battles a proven percentage, or tries fate, he is out-smarting himself. This has nothing to do with the element of surprise.

A catcher fakes that a ball has got past him, moves quickly as though he was running back for it, hoping to nip an ambitious baserunner. Well, after seeing him do that a few times, a base-runner is likely to keep right on going, and steal a base. The guessing game can become a pattern, too.

This is not confined to performers who are known to be smarter than the others, but a player can't out-smart himself without some thought.

Where Yogi Berra of the Yankees will do the routine—and for him it's good—call for the orthodox pitch, throw, hit-and-run, etc., Tebbetts will think, "Maybe I'll fool him with the other one."

The hitter will be thinking, too, thinking that maybe this quick-on-the-trigger catcher will switch, and then Birdie Tebbetts has out-smarted himself.

PRINCETON, N. J.—(NEA)—Everybody knows what Charles William Caldwell, Jr., did with the buck lateral series at Princeton. There may have been better college football teams, but none was better drilled.

Undergraduates insist Charlie Caldwell is the greatest thing to hit Tigertown in years. Even old-timers who fought and bled for Bill Roper are convinced that Old Nassau has never had a coach like the man chosen by his colleagues as Coach-of-the-Year in the annual poll conducted by the New York World-Telegram and Sun.

But this has to do with Caldwell, the personality. He is a completely casual person, who is known on the campus—from President Harold Willis Dodds to an entering freshman—as Charlie.

Charlie and his fellow coaches are called by their first names; in fact, Charlie introduced coaches to incoming freshmen by their first names. While Charlie is a pupil of the dynamic "A Team That Won't Be Beat, Can't Be Beat" Roper and long on spirit, he dispenses with forensics.

For instance, he devotes half-times to making adjustments in individual and team assignments and quietly offering advice.

CHARLIE, who belies his 46 years in appearance and condition, never interferes with a member of his staff.

If he has a suggestion, possibly a correction, he waits until after practice, and iron out the wrinkle with the aid in private.

Charlie doesn't mind criticism of himself, but becomes highly indignant if anyone takes one of his players to task.

It is his conviction that a college student should not be criticized for any mistake he might make in football, which, he points out, is an extra-curricular activity.

Charlie is highly respected not only by players and coaches but also by all university officials, with whom he gets along beautifully. His thorough understanding of the so-called undergraduate psychological factor is largely responsible for the one-year upsets he has been pulling since returning to his alma mater in 1945.

"First these boys are my friends and Princeton students," he says. "Then they're my players."

"If I had to be just a coach and nothing more, I would have gotten out long ago."

MILK RIVER RANGE

by LEE FLOREN

Chapter 10
THE farmers met that morning at the Lazy N-S. They grouped in the big parlor and called the meeting to order.

Buck and Tortilla, squatting at the back of the room, rolled cigarettes and smoked silently.

Buck read the feeling rightly. Some were scared, yes, but others—the vast majority—were ready to fight.

One man said, "What do you say, Jim?"

Jim Tuttle walked to the front of the room where he stood for some time without speaking. Then he said, "I got you men into this country. When the dam is finished we'll have plenty of water—water for all. And water will give us crops and independence."

"We'd better guard that dam," said one farmer.

"I don't think Cavanaugh'll hit the dam," Jesse Smith broke in. "The Jones is a lawman, and a good one."

"We'd better stake a guard out," someone suggested.

They took a vote on it. The decision was overwhelmingly in favor of posting guards twenty-four hours a day at the dam. Buck saw the conflict mirrored in Jesse Smith's face; then the man's features settled back into their old mold.

Other points were brought up. Tuttle called for Buck McKee to come up. Tuttle introduced him.

"You've been through a few range wars, McKee," shouted a man. "What do you say we should do?"

"Ride with one eye on your back-trail, a gun on your hip, and a rifle in your saddle-bag. Never get too far away from a gun. Leave your dogs out at night. Keep somebody on guard, if you can."

"You pull'n' a wagon out for roundup?" someone asked.

Buck nodded. "And I need some riders."

Tortilla went to work on the mess wagon. With the help of the old mozo, Mack Bodkins, an shoved him out o' town. Reck on the kid's jumpin' the country."

"Funny, Shuffie would let him ride out," said a cowpuncher.

"Maybe Peanuts never got away," said another.

"Jim Tuttle know this?" asked Buck, moving off a short distance with the garrulous oldster.

"I told him when I reached the Lazy N-S about midnight. Jim told me to ride out an' tell you. Jim says to be sure an' watch Mack so he and won't sneak off an' get killed, Buckin' Cavanaugh."

"I'll ride herd on him."

They rode down the gully together. At the turn in the creek they halted and Wishbone looked at the mess wagon, now about a mile away and moving north.

"I'm quittin' that jail job," he said. "Could you use a extra hand, McKee?"

"Sure."

"See you in a day or two, McKee. So long."

Buck smiled, watching the old man ride south. A tall man, he observed, riding the saddle as he himself did—hands braced against fork, tank, body standing on stirrups. Buck dismissed those thoughts and turned north.

THERE was a hint of rain that night, but dawn came clear and Buck, who rode last guard with Jesse Smith, came into the camp, whistling.

"We're not going any farther north, men. We're getting the wagon here and riding circle out from this point."

Smith asked, "Why not go north, Buck? Thought of Jim told us to make South Creek before turnin' back?"

"Buck's right, Jesse," Mart Tuttle broke in. "We've gone far enough. If there ain't enough heifers in here for the old man, there's not enough anyplace."

"Come an' get it!" roared Mack Bodkin.

"This Peanuts kid?"

"Sheriff Jones was lookin' for him right after the killin', but he couldn't find hair nor hide of the younger. Later, I heard that Shuffie Watson bought him a hoss."

speed. With this added push, a stock would converge with coulees and gulches came together on the creek bottom below. Once they got in a herd, it would be easier to hold by riders. Also, by the time they ran twenty miles or so, they'd be so tired that the wild edge would be somewhat dulled.

MANY thoughts, some distant, tugged at the tail of the puncher. A great unrest, moving inside him, demanded action. It was clear, the lines had been spoken. There was war on to range and there was only one way to end that war, and that was, gunfire.

He realized that old Jim Tuttle knew this, too. Jim had been around. But time had taken its edge from him. Now he was hanging against hope that violent war would not flare.

"But we'll play it Jim's way," he told Mart.

Mart scowled. "I guess so. But Cavanaugh and Watson's burned down Bornell. If Jones had the proof, he'd go against them. But he hasn't."

"Jim's way is wrong," said Buck.

Mart nodded.

Buck leaned back in saddle. The sunset was in the sky. He looked at it for some time. "War can be settled by guns, Mart," he said presently. "You'd better kill men or they'll kill you. The whole thing is piling up, building up. When it touches me directly, move—and to heck with I Jones."

"We'd better ride in pairs," Buck put spurs to the line-bag and he and Mart loped into camp—two lean, tall riders.

Next morning, they rode out still heading north. Just before they started, Wishbone Han rode into camp on a hamme headed sorrel. The old jail said he had looked them over. "Need any extra hand?" asked Buck.

"You didn't come out here looking for a job. Wishbone. What's your mind, fella?"

"Shuffie Watson killed L. Parker last night," the old jail said.

mouth, an' too long on the words he told Buck.

"You're an old woman."

Tortilla Joe chewed his back thoughtfully. "Maybe so," he admitted. "We ride out in pairs. He did not wait for an answer. I ride with you the amigo."

Buck rode a dun gelding. He gave orders crisply, efficient there in the cold dawn. The would ride in pairs. At noon they'd change horses.

"Watch your horses on those slant men," he cautioned. "Bronc can go for a slide on those slopes after this rain. Len Cavanaugh might have riders in the district. Always keep in sight of your partner or some other Lazy N-S rider."

"Cavanaugh won't hit the herd," said Jesse Smith.

"How do you know?"

"Well, it just stands to reason. I think. He'd hit the dam first. Buck disregarded the man. "If a horse should fall and throw you and leave you afoot, fix twice in the air. The man who hears that signal should ride in your direction."

Tortilla Joe, riding a big black ran the horse close to Buck.

"You mean that, Buck?"

"Mean what?"

"What you said back there—that Cavanaugh would heet the herd before hectin' the dam. What make you say that?"

"Well, if Cavanaugh runs Jim Tuttle out of Milk River Valley, Cavanaugh will own the dam. Tuttle can't take it with him."

"Then thee cattle—"

"If we gather this herd, Jim has the money to stay in and fight. If we don't," agreed the Mexican.

"That's right," agreed the Mexican.

Special Services Are Presented in Corydon Churches

Corydon, Dec. 27—Special services were held Sunday in both community churches, while earlier the Methodist church was the scene of a very fine candlelight service arranged under the direction of Mrs. Paul Duntley. An attractively trimmed tree featured the decorations and there was a distribution of gifts.

Members of the Women's Auxiliary of the local fire department made up a sunshine basket of gifts that was presented Saturday to Mrs. Ruth Crooks.

Among those entertaining at family dinner parties Christmas Day were Mrs. Blanche Kennedy and Mrs. Rubie Day, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Tome, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Whyte, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Prue, Mrs. B. M. Stoltz and numerous other localities.

Craig Bunker, with the U. S. forces, arrived Saturday night to spend a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Bunker.

Mrs. Nora Crooks has returned from spending the holiday week-end in Endicott and with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Crooks at Chenevas, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Cox and Louise Porter, holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Platt and family, have returned to Washington, D. C. Miss Porter also visited the Carl Laubachs.

Lena Schuler is spending Christmas week with Warren relatives and friends.

Lincoln and Danny VanSickel are spending the holiday season at home.

The Changing Landscapes

HAROLD W. GEIGER

Hello, folks The winter continues to be cold and snowy, making things pretty tough on the wildlife in our fields and forests. A good idea for all of us is to get out now and help distribute some food for the game. The Warren Field and Stream Club corn crib, located at Conevango and Pennsylvania Avenue is chuck full and just waiting for you sportsmen to make use of it.

Conservation farmers have been busy this past week completing more farm plans. Looks like a busy spring and summer season ahead for us with more than eleven miles of terraces and diversions already scheduled for construction in Warren County next summer.

Dan Mourer, Youngsville farmer.

er. finished his conservation plan last week. Dan's planning is for tree planting, pasture improvement and woodland improvement. Many of you will remember Dan as the local forest fire warden down there in the Youngsville area.

Fred Jensen, Columbus Township farmer, finished making his conservation plans on his two places this week. Fred's problem is an excess of water on his fields. He plans a drainage system, a farm pond and quite a bit of pasture improvement.

Derward Porter from Spring Creek is interested in terracing some contour strip cropping. His plan, finished this week, also calls for tree planting and use of multiflora rose hedges for permanent pasture fencing. Derward is also a game enthusiast and wants to plant some wildlife shrubs for game food and cover.

Here is part of a news item I read this week which should prove of real interest to all conservation farmers in this area: "The Pennsylvania State College, the State Soil Conservation Commission, and the U. S. Soil Conservation Service have entered into a cooperative agreement which provides for the dissemination of educational and technical conservation services to those farmers of the Commonwealth who reside in soil conservation districts, it was announced jointly Saturday by President Milton S. Eisenhower, of the College, Secretary Miles Horst, Chairman of the State Commission, and Dr. Austin L. Patrick, regional director of the Soil Conservation Service.

"In the agreement, the Extension service of the college is recognized as being responsible for and having leadership in all informal educational work in agriculture in the commonwealth, including educational work in soil conservation."

conservation.

"The Soil Conservation Service is recognized as being responsible for providing technical guidance in conservation to individual farmers who reside within soil districts."

The Jolly Ten Birthday club held a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Gordon Johnson, Thursday evening. Secret sisters were revealed and names were drawn for new secret sisters for the next year. Gifts were exchanged and it was planned to have a New Year's party, place to be announced later. Refreshments were served by hostess assisted by Mrs. Earl Laurence.
